

The Answer Is In The Room: Implementation, Execution, Accountability and Collaboration – by Sally Foley - Lewis

I trust you enjoyed the EAN Conference as much I did - what a blast! Now it's back to work and that can sometimes mean getting pulled back into doing the same things and getting the same outcome. If those outcomes are awesome and you're happy, that's fantastic keep it up. If however, you'd like to shift those 'same old things' then you know you have to do different things, right!?! Over the years one of the areas of development that people struggle to find the time to do is read. I know for sure that leaders are readers no matter the job title.

Making, taking or finding time to read professional and personal development books can be a massive challenge for many busy professionals. Reading for development usually falls into the “I wish” category. There are many reasons why many don't read or read as much as they'd like. Reasons include:

- I keep buying books but never seem to find the time to read them. I now have an overwhelming stack of books I doubt I'll ever get to.
- So many books, so little time.
- I simply just don't know what to read.
- I buy books, I start them but never seem to finish them.

These are common comments super intelligent people share. It's no secret that reading expands your worldview, book clubs are renowned for helping people stay accountable to reading, gaining deeper insights into the book topic and boost individual development.

This Book Club for Professional Development™ - BCforPD™ - is designed to be do-able and more meaningful: one book per quarter and a facilitated discussion with the other members. Best part of all, our book club meeting is online, saving you time and no need to worry about distance. We have members from a diverse range of industries and business sizes which means our discussions will be rich with different perspectives and insights.
